ONCE THERE WAS A GIRL WITH A DREAM IN HER HEART

Like all strong people, she suffered always a measure of loneliness;
she was a marginal outsider, a secret infidel of a certain sort.

She was broken but never hopeless; alone
but never lonely. Her eyes reflected pain but projected courage.
She was a beautiful
paradox.

The background of the slide is a photograph of a dirt path winding through a dense forest. The image has been processed with a high-contrast, posterized effect, resulting in a limited color palette of bright greens, yellows, and oranges. The text '16 COLOURS NOT 16 BILLION COLOURS' is superimposed over the center of the image in a large, bold, black font with a white outline. The words '16 COLOURS' and 'COLOURS' are on separate lines, with 'NOT 16 BILLION' in between. The word 'COLOURS' is repeated at the bottom of the text block.

A person is shown in a dark, wooded area, holding a large, glowing, multi-colored orb. The orb emits a bright, rainbow-like light that illuminates the surrounding trees and foliage. The person's face is partially visible, looking towards the orb. The overall scene is dramatic and mystical.

"Censorship is saying: 'I'm the one who says the last sentence. Whatever you say, the conclusion is mine.' But the internet is like a tree that is growing.

The people will always have the last word - even if someone has a very weak, quiet voice.

Such power will collapse because of a whisper."
